and contained many young girls of extreme beauty, ranging from 9 to 17 years of age. These levely captives, of a rich brown tint, with delicately formed features and eyes like those of the gazelle, were natives of the Galla, on the borders of Abyssinia, from which country, they were brought by the Abyssinian traders, to be sold for the Turkish harems. Although beautiful, these girls are useless for hand labor; they quickly fade away and die unless kindly treatel. They are the Yeauses of that country, and not only are their faces and figures perfection, but they become extremely attached to those who showthen kindness and they make good and faithful wives. There is something peculighly continuiting in the natural grace and softmess of these young beauties, whose bearts quickly respond to those warmer feelings of love that are soldon known among the sterner and courser tribes. Their forms are peculiarly elegant and graceful, the hands and feet are exquisitely delicate, the nose is allgattly aquiling. the nostrils largely and finely, shaped; the bair is black and glory, reaching to glant the middle of the back, but rather charge in texture, The girls, although natives of Gilla, invariably call themselves Abyssinians, and are generally known under that denomination. They are exree lingly proved and high-spirited, and are rumarkably quick at learning At Keartonnia everal of the Europeans of high standing have married these charming ladies, who have invariably, rewarded their husbands by great effection and devotion. Peter, from imbiling too freely of various mixtures, began dameing round, with a waiter containing soons less and cakes, and soon, become uproacions. Observing his conduct, the Major publicly reprinctuded and at once disiniesed him from his post of waiter for the evening, and appennted another in his place. This last stroke was too much for old Peter, and herstired to his bollroom in despair. That night Captain K a bity young officer, in the room anjoining Peter's, hearing ground and nobs in the next. room, rose to inquire whit was the mater. He opened the door of Peter's room and reconnoitred. Peter was kneeling by a window, and prayel: amid his land cries, the Captain overheard the following: -"O I seed, have pity on Thy poor old servant. His massa, whom he used to Like upon his knees when he was a boy, is rexell
